

Robert Ramsey, a Democratic congressman from West Virginia, thinks it's unsafe to permit business men to spend their own money fighting for a political cause. Ramsey has introduced a bill to prohibit using an income tax deduction the following:

"Any expenditure for advertising that refers to a political party, candidate for office, political theory, or political issue; or any contribution for campaign expenses; or any expenditure (including any expenditure for advertising or for the purpose of advertising) for lobbying purposes, the promotion or defeat of legislation, or the exploitation of propaganda."

Ramsey says he doesn't criticize the use of advertising in politics, but he thinks it's unfair when the cost of that advertising is a tax deductible expense.

Listen to who's talking! This stalwart for democracy and freedom takes one-third of the nation's personal and corporate income for federal taxes and then has the gall to say if citizens mean to make public protest they've got to do so out of the dwindling balance the government has left them to live on.

This is a perfect example of the growing arrogance of the Washington Federalists who mean to rule their own way and won't brook any opposition.

That's what it adds up to. The Federalists don't dare to suppress public opinion directly, but they mean to achieve the same end by manipulating the tax laws so as to exclude all public comment whatsoever. In the words of the Federalist congressman: "Political theory, candidate for office, political theory, or political issue" — if it is anything at all to do with the United States of America it is "political."

And yet these same Federalist monkeys make speeches over the air, and get statements printed in the newspapers and magazines, by virtue of public office — and it's all "for free."

But the low dog of a common citizen, he may growl all he wants to where he won't be heard farther than a city block — but he is prohibited from spending one dime to amplify his remarks so they will be heard in high quarters and strike where it hurts.

Where is unfairness and corruption — usually greater — in the budgets of private citizens, or in the massed forces of great political machines dominating the nation from behind the walls of the treasury of the richest land on earth?

And who will bring these tyrants to heel unless the people are permitted to speak their piece and back it up with donations according to time-honored tradition in our America?

History of Hope Plant Told at Kiwanis Meet

A history of the Hope Flooring and Lumber Company was outlined by General Manager John Wallace at the regular Tuesday noon luncheon of the Hope Kiwanis Club on a program arranged by Aubrey Albritton.

The local plant was started June 13, 1946 with the first oak flooring being produced the following December. Only two per cent of the flooring has been sold in Arkansas with the balance being shipped to 38 states.

In this five years the plant has produced 20,980,962 feet of oak flooring, enough to furnish 20,980 homes. This would floor all the homes in a city seven times the size of Hope.

The 5-year period employees payroll was $731,471.33 with taxes, insurances on the wages amounting to $49,870.43. Sawmills, all sizes, within 100 miles radius of Hope was paid $1,716,693.58 while local firms including electrical, water and gas were paid in excess of $273,000. Mr. Wallace concluded.

Vance Smiley and J. S. Draper were taken in as new members. Dr. Mason and Ed Rogers were visitors.

Show Reveals Hitler's Love Nest Slaying

Of all Hollywood's many productions, probably the most absorbing are those which deal with the lives of history, living or dead. The appearance and performance of an actor impersonating a great individual frequently lends credence even to the theme of the plot.

The brief announcement said: "It was announced from Sandringham at 10:45 a. m. today (February 6) 1933 that the king, who retired to rest last night in his usual health, passed peacefully away in his sleep early this morning."

Death came to the king at the same estate where he was born Dec. 14, 1895.

He had reigned through 18 of Britain's most momentous years. He succeeded to the throne Dec. 11, 1901, when his brother, Edward VII, abdicated for the "woman's love". Edward became the Duke of Windsor.

The king's wife, Queen Elizabeth, and his younger daughter, Princess Margaret, were at Sandringham at the time of death.

The death came as a stunning shock to Britain and the empire. The monarch had been believed well on the road to recovery from his dangerous operation of last Sept. 23, when all or part of one lung was removed.

The king had been out in the countryside in both morning and afternoon yesterday, apparently in good health. Only last week he had attended a performance in London of the American musical, "South Pacific."

But royal subjects recalled that his voice sounded harsh and shaky in his annual Christmas Day broadcast in December. And pictures taken as he bade farewell to the Princess Elizabeth and her husband only last Thursday showed him thin and haggard.

The king, with the queen and Princess Margaret, had planned to take a cruise in March through the warm waters of the South Atlantic to South Africa in an attempt to speed his recovery.

News of the sovereign's death spread rapidly throughout the country. Flags were lowered to half staff. The House of Commons adjourned. Theaters and music halls closed. The British Broadcasting Corporation cancelled all but news broadcasts.

The announcement of the death was telephoned from Sandringham House to Buckingham Palace after Dr. James Ansell, a surgeon-apothecary to the king, had been summoned to the country home and confirmed the death.

The cabinet met at 10 Downing and more of the state functions. She made royal visits to France, Italy and Canada. When the king underwent a serious lung operation Sept. 23, 1931, Elizabeth again became a member of the council of state.

Elizabeth and her handsome husband were on a five-month tour of the British empire and commonwealth—a trip the king was to have made before he became ill in September last year—when her father died and Elizabeth Alexandra Mary Windsor became queen of Great Britain.

A&amp;P Observes Founder's Week Here

Announcement was made today that the A&P store in Hope will participate in a Founder's Week celebration, beginning Monday, February 5.

Founder's Week, an annual event at A&P, is observed in memory of the founder of A&P, the late George Huntington Hartford. The A&P store here will have a special sales promotion and will feature a large number of food products at specially reduced prices. The manager of the local A&P is Royce Smith, who resides at 520 S. Main Street.

A&P was founded in 1850. The original store was a small one on Vesey Street in New York City. That store has grown to a chain of almost 5,000 A&P stores in some thirty-seven states, the District of Columbia and Canada.

With the business genius applied by Mr. Hartford's sons to his original dream, he lived to see his hopes materialize and his merchandising ideas revolutionized in the grocery business of America. His sons are George H. Hartford, now 87 and treasurer of A&P and the late John Hartford who died last September at the age of 78.

The A&P store in this city is operated now out of the Company Dallas office which services stores in four Southwestern states. O. I. Black is vice-president in charge of the Dallas Unit.

Because of its size, efficiency and one-family ownership A&P has managed to do business on a small or gross profit rate than any business in history, 1.1 cents on the dollar. Its savings on distribution costs, brought about through mass purchases and its own manufacturing and processing subsidiaries are passed on in lower prices to consumers.

Small wonder, then, that even Hollywood is talking about the brilliant work of Luther Adler in Columbia Pictures' "The Magic Face" now at the Shenger theater with Patricia Knight also starring. In "The Magic Face," Adler plays Janus, the Great, a famous stage impersonator who killed Adolf Hitler and took Dr. Fuhrer's place in history and in love, during the days when Berlin was the world capital of art. With that single characterization, Adler might well have been content, but the picture's story, as written and produced by Mori Briskin and Robert Smith, permit him also to appear as Benito Mussolini, Neville Chamberlain and Juile Salasale, men immediately recognizable to theater audiences. Adler's is an historic triumph which is all the more remarkable in that he himself resembles none of the persons he so brilliantly portrays.

In "The Magic Face," Adler is thrown into a concentration camp when his wife desert him for Hitler, one of the men Janus is so skilled at imitating. The actor uses his histrionic skill to escape, to insert himself in the tangle of his hated rival and, ultimately, to kill Dr. Fuhrer and assume his place. This last daring deception deceives not only the world but Janus' own wife, who cannot tell apart the kisser of the two men.

The story of "The Magic Face" was told to foreign correspondent William L. Shirer by a woman he describes as "a strange and beautiful," who claimed to be Hitler's sweetheart. Shirer asserts that he cannot say whether the story she told him is true or false, but he says that the story is "a masterpiece of invention." "The Magic Face" is offering a $10,000 reward to the first person who can authentically disprove the amazing impersonation depicted in the film.

Street. A silent gathering of about 50 men and women watched for a while Secretary Anthony Eden and other ministers arrive.

There was no immediate announcement of the date of the king's burial. However, he will be laid to rest alongside Britain's long line of monarchs in hallowed Westminster Abbey.

It is in Westminster Abbey that the new Queen Elizabeth will be formally crowned in six months hence.

But Elizabeth, 25, became reigning sovereign of the 14,433,000 square miles and 239,470,000 persons who make up the British commonwealth and empire immediately upon the king's death.

As soon as Elizabeth arrives back in Britain, the privy council will meet in the throne room at St. James Palace to approve a proclamation formally making her sovereign.

The council comprises about 200 government members, former prime ministers, other national leaders and local commissioners of the dominions.

Once the council has approved the proclamation, Elizabeth will be crowned in the church of St. James.

Elizabeth is Britain's first reigning queen since the memorable Victoria. Her husband is the first royal consort since Albert, husband of Victoria.

Their 13-year-old son, Charles, is now crown prince. News of the king's death was dashed at once to Elizabeth and Philip in Kenya. But last the news might reach her by radio before she was told privately.

British news agencies and the British Broadcasting Corporation said that the announcement of the death of the king was certain Elizabeth and Philip would be in London by the time the king died.

called for the appointment of five North Korean and Chinese government representatives to meet with in three months of a Korean armistice to negotiate the settlement of the following questions:

1.—Withdrawal of all foreign forces from Korea.

2.—Peaceful settlement of the Korean question.

$50 on each application for electrical service with the applicant paying the balance of the cost of extending lines to this property. Monthly bills which the applicant pays will be credited to the cost of the line until the amount is paid out.

This plan was outlined to E. N. May, who seeks electrical service for his property at a cost of $327.20. Under this plan the customer would pay out the line in monthly bill payments.

W. W. Andrew asked that his insurance agency be allowed to write part of the city's insurance. No action was taken on the proposal.

An ordinance to vacate an alley in College addition met approval of the council.

The Mayor advised that Life McMahon desires of rent 9 acres of land in the Froving Ground which the city owns. The group decided to give him a year's lease with option of renewal at $50 per year.

Purchasing new lights for the airport was discussed and the need was agreed on. Clyde Zinn was instructed to take care of the matter, with the cost to be taken out of the airport fund.

A request from Tom J. Harris that the city pay for sewer line right-of-way across his property was turned over to the street committee.

The council agreed to lease a portion of 17th street west to railway to Jesse Sinclair at the rate of $1 per year for a period of five years with the reservation that the city can reclaim the street on 30-days notice.

Persons making applications to city which require publication of legal notices will henceforth have to place a deposit with the city treasurer to pay for cost of publication.

Eugene Cox was instructed to find out how much the city allowed on a fogging machine in a trade on a new one.

Truman Urges Help for Scouts

New York, Feb. 6 (AP)—President Truman urged Americans to give their "unqualified support" to the Boy Scout's new three-year program, "Forward on Liberty's Team."

In a message last night on the eve of Boy Scout Week, Mr. Truman said he doubted "if anyone can measure the strength in character, the capacity for leadership and the acceptance of individual responsibility that results from scout training."

Barkley Hints End of Career

Louisville, Ky., Feb. 6 (AP)—Vice President Alben Barkley appears to be giving thought to the idea that his long career in Washington may be nearing an end.

Barkley, whose place in the 1952 political picture hasn't been clearly defined, came to Louisville to join Mrs. Barkley at a dinner opening Kentucky's Heart Fund drive.

Speaking briefly, he noted the presence of Rep. Thurston B. Morton, a Louisville Republican. Barkley is a Democrat.

"Mr. Morton always offers to help me after an election," the vice president said. "I wish he would lend me a hand during an election."

Then, as an afterthought, he smilingly said: "I may not be around Washington after the next one."

What to Look for on Filing Tax

Note: This is the first of 10 stories explaining what to look for on filing your 1951 income tax return.

JAMES MARLOW.

Washington, Feb. 6 (AP) — Here are reminders on what to do, what to watch out for, if you are filing your 1951 income tax return on Form 1040-A or the short form.

1. If you and your wife make a joint return, both must sign it. Be sure when you hand in the return that you attach to it the receipts — Form W-2 — from your boss as proof of what he paid you and how much he withheld from you last year. Be careful, under item No. 1 on both forms, to claim all the exemptions to which you're entitled. For each you knock $600 off your income before what's left is taxed.

2. If you're filing a return and a dependent for himself another if he is blind, and still another if he's 65. That would give you a total of three exemptions.

3. If your wife had no income and you alone file a return — or if you didn't have income but you file jointly with you — you get an exemption for her, another for her blind, plus another for her 65.

4. If you're a dependent — a wife never considered a dependent — you only one $600 exemption. Nothing extra if he's blind or 65.

5. If your wife had any income, no matter how small, you get an exemption for her unless she files jointly with you. If she files separately she claims her exemption on her return.

6. Remember that Form 1040-A is the short form can be used only for reporting income of $4,000. If you're reporting income more than that, you can't use the short form. You must use the 1040 long form where you show your own tax.

7. If you're under $4,000 you can use the short form where you find the tax in the table on the back. If you're under $4,000 you can use Form 1040-A only if—

8. If tax was withheld from your income except for no more than $100 in untaxed wages, interest or dividends. If you don't have any — most wage-earners — you're under $4,000, you can use the 1040 short form.

9. If you're using 1040-A or the short form, automatically get a deduction for personal expenses of $100 per cent. He gets it automatically. He doesn't have to claim it unless he's allowed for in the table on the back.

10. If your income was under $4,000 and your deductions were more than 10 per cent, then use the 1040 long form, where you'll find the table but can claim your deductions in full.

11. If you're on Form 1040-A — or do so figuring. Answer the question: You pay no money when you turn it in, even though you owe tax. The collector will figure the tax for you.

12. If you owe much tax was withheld from you during the year, he'll give you a refund. If he finds you owe tax, he'll notify you. You have 10 days after that notification to pay the tax.

13. If you file jointly on Form 1040-A, the collector will figure your tax both ways to see if it's cheaper for you to file separately. He'll give you credit for what he finds.

14. If you're using the 1040 short form — or use the table on page 1 — you pay close attention to those columns which show the tax based on (1) your income and (2) the number of exemptions claimed on your return.

15. If you have two children, your total income of $4,835. If your wife had earned $35, you'd have four exemptions; their income and one each for their children.

16. If you're showing income from $4,835 Jones looks across the column showing the tax on four exemptions. It says his $4,835 is between

A-BOMB CARRIER—This photograph of the Air Force's eight-jet, heavy bomber, the Boeing B-52 'Stratofortress', has just been released in Washington. The long-range experimental bomber is equipped with eight Pratt and Whitney turbo-jet engines. Air Force Secretary Thomas Finletter says this photo shows the least possible information that could be of value to the enemy. He asked news photographers and the public to refrain from taking other pictures of the atomic-bomb carrier.

$4,800 and $4,850 — that the tax on him and his wife is $300.

But, since Mrs. Jones' income was less than $4,000, she doesn't have to file a return at all, separately or jointly with Jones. But, since she had some income, even though only $35, he can't claim an exemption for her unless she files jointly with him.

Say she doesn't file jointly. That leaves him only three exemptions, for himself and the two children. And his income, minus her $35, is $4,800. He looks across that same line as before, the one showing the tax on $4,800-$4,850 income.

But this time he looks under the column for a married man with three exemptions — filing separately — and finds his tax is $330 or $134 more than when he and his wife filed jointly, claiming four exemptions.

If you're a self-employed person using the 1040 short form, note line No. 6 B on page 1, where it says to list your social security tax, if you're self-employed.

This year several million self-employed people pay a social security tax on their self-employment income for 1951. The tax is 3-1-4 per cent of the first $3,000 of that income.

If you're in this group, list the amount of your social security tax on line 5 B and pay it, when you file the income tax return, together with any income tax you owe.

Besides using form 1040 for their income tax return, the self-employed must also use a separate form, Schedule C, where they provide information necessary for determining their social security tax.

Many people filing on the 1040 short form must use not only Page 1 but Page 2, also, because of their special income and problems. Because they find their tax in the table on Page 4, they don't use page 3 which is strictly for those figuring their own tax.

MSA To Order Small Vessels

Rome, Feb. 6 (AP) — Italian sources say the U. S. Mutual Security Administration is planning to order 25 to 30 million dollars worth of small naval ships — eight submarines and 10 landing craft — from Italian shipyards.

American's European allies would get the ships, the informants said, to bolster Atlantic Pact forces.

The orders, they said, would go to Italian shipyards "if the price is right."

The U. S. Embassy here confirmed that a U. S. Navy team of engineering experts is in Rome discussing with Italy's Ministry of Marine "the possibility of undertaking a program of construction in Italy of naval vessels of specific design."

Better Not Feed Animals in Parks

Washington, Feb. 5 (AP) — No longer may visitors to the national parks feed the wild animals.

Announcing this today, Secretary of the Interior Chapman said too many people are being attacked because of the mistaken belief that animals found in the national parks are tame and can be handled as pets.

There are instances too numerous to mention where supposed "tame" wild animals have attacked their benefactors, the National Park Service said.

The regulation prohibits "feeding, touching, teasing or molesting of any bear, deer, moose, buffalo (bison), bighorn mountain sheep, elk or antelope."

The service for some time has forbidden the feeding or molesting of bears.

It said bears "continue to present the principal problem of public safety."

U. S. to Take Action on Storage Firms

Washington, Feb. 6 (AP) — A survey showed today the government had taken legal action to collect about $4,875,000 from 15 storage firms in connection with alleged shortages of grains and other farm products stored under price support programs.

In addition, the government has gone to court to recover $177,000 from firms which, it says, failed to deliver grains of the grade the government bought from them for an overseas supply program.

Furthermore legal action is being considered in connection with 12 other cases of shortages. The amounts involved have not been determined.

Possible shortages in 29 other elevators and warehouses are being investigated.

Great differences of opinion prevail as to the extent of final losses. Some members of congressional committees investigating the shortages and the way the Agriculture Department has handled its grain storage program predict the losses will run into many millions of dollars.

Secretary of Agriculture Brannan, on the other hand, says he expects the total to be far less than five million dollars, probably less than one million.

Brannan estimates total losses will be less than one-twentieth of one per cent of the total volume of commodities handled by commercial storage concerns.

The survey shows that losses and suspected losses fall into three general classes: (1) conversion, (2)

Senators to Air Nomination of McDonald

Washington, Feb. 6 (AP) — The Senate Banking Committee got set today for a new tug-of-war with the White House over the nomination of Harry A. McDonald to head the Reconstruction Finance Corporation (RFC).

Committee leaders sought in an interview with President Truman to talk over the group's latest refusal to vote on McDonald for a new government post while his present agency is being investigated. He is chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC), which is under scrutiny by a House committee.

Senator Maybank (D-SC), under committee orders, agreed to lead a delegation to the White House including Senators Fulbright (D-Ark) and Capehart (R-Ind).

"Here we are," Maybank said.

each; Texas, 12; Missouri, Nebraska and New Mexico, two each; and Ohio four.

The Agriculture Department says that most of the 29 cases being investigated may involve shortages arising out of normal shrinkage or deterioration of grain while in storage, rather than conversion to private use.

The department says its claims against such losses will probably be settled without litigation. It says that in most cases of shortages of this nature, bonds given by the concerns to protect the government will more than cover losses.

The 29 cases being investigated are located as follows: Colorado, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, North Carolina, and Oklahoma, one shrinkages and (3) failure of purchased grain to measure up to grades paid for.

The conversion cases are the ones that have drawn the most criticism.

They mainly involve use of government grain by storage firms for speculative purposes. The concerns sold the grain in the belief they could buy it back later at a lower price and thereby make a profit.

The 14 pending court cases charge conversion of government grain to private use. Four of these cases, involving $2,626,400 in wheat and grain sorghums, are against Texas concerns. Two, involving beans, wheat, barley and grain sorghums valued at $775,000, are against Colorado firms.

Three cases involving $504,000 worth of wheat, corn and soybeans, are against Ohio firms; two involving $327,000 worth of corn are against Illinois firms; one involving $13,000 worth of corn is against a Nebraska concern; one claiming $65,000 for corn is against a Georgia firm; one involving $225,000 in barley is against a California concern; and one involving $28,000 in wheat is against a Kansas company.

Wetback Measure Up to House

Washington, Feb. 6 (AP) — The House is expected to approve quickly a Senate-passed measure levying stiff penalties for smuggling farm laborers from Mexico into the United States.

The Senate passed the measure by voice vote yesterday after an afternoon of debate.
